lost army of between 20,000 and ered search by air and sea. 25,000 Loyalists fought on in Catalonia today as the government es-tablished itself in Madrid, whence it had fled in November, 1936.

Long after the Nationalists had announced complete occupation of Catalonia, it was found that two Loyalist divisions, the 31st and 32nd, had been cut off from the main body of the Catalonian army and intended fighting as long as their ammunition held out.

Trapped The lost force was based at the village of Camprodon, about seven miles below the frontier. When the Nationalists took the Olot region last week, these divisions were separated from two army corps. Their line of retreat lay along a secondary road and a narrow, snow filled pass which runs between peaks up to 9000 feet high. On the French side there is only a foot path running through a ravine. It was impossible for the two divisions to evacuate their artillery and supplies so they apparently decided to retreat as slowly as possible and make their exit from the country as costly as possible to the Nationalists.

The Nationalists, in their joy at conquering Catalonia, seemed to have overlooked the two divisions for days. Today, however, it was reported that Nationalist infantrymen were trying to get into the mountains behind the Loyalists and cut off their retreat.

Madrid Bombed

The first day of the Loyalist cabinet at Madrid was marked by two Nationalist artillery bombardments which, it was announced, killed at least 16 persons and wounded 23. Insurgent airplanes raided Valencia, Alicante and other Loyalist towns along the eastern coast.

It was announced at Madrid that President Manuel Azana, who is at the Spanish embassy in Paris and thus technically on Spanish soil, had signed a decree establishing the government at Madrid

The cabinet held its first meeting yesterday, with nearly all members present. Afterward the following message was broadcast:

Proclamation "An immense task awaits us. The government has determined JUDITUL BRAIL to spare no effort to cope with the situation, which requires the fervent collaboration of all in a heroic national front. Have you ever stopped to think what an important part ADVERTISING plays in making all this possible?

Without advertising, no merchant could afford to risk a large investment in merchandise - and wait and wait till some chance customer happened in. . . . Without advertising you would be unaware of the many lovely, useful, needful things assembled in the stores for your convenience. . . . OUR LITERARY CONVICTS

Inmates of federal prisons read from five to ten times as many books as people who patronize public libraries.

About 75 per cent of all inmates of federal books each last year, the Federal Bureau of Prisone has found

At Alcatraz, where the inmates presumably are all four-minute eggs, 98 per cent of them averaged

At least a third of the books drawn in the federal prisons are non-fiction, suggesting not merely the time-killing incident to a population which after all isn't going anywhere, but ambition. What an improvement this is over the days when prisoners were lockstepped from dungeon to rockpile and back again day after day, year after year.

How many of these men will have learned from the world of books during their enforced separation from the real world the things they need to turn them to useful lives? It would be useless to exaggerate. Probably most of them read from sheer boredom. But the high percentage of nonfiction subjects suggests that many are trying to prepare themselves to do better on their second

No matter how small the percentage of men set on the right track by prison libraries, the result is worth more than it costs.

WESTOVER'S GOLDEN WEDDING BILL

When Senator Westover was asked to explain his Golden Wedding Bill, at the Orange County Property Owners Association meeting Tuesday night, his remarks showed that he has made no study of the taxation problem. He rambled around by saying people did many peculiar things-they penalize a man for building a house—and he wanted to encourage people to live together for

The government does not penalize a man for building a house, as Westover says. It simply charges him for the service the government renders him in protecting his property. If the man occupies the home, he pays the taxes himself; if he rents the house, the renter over a period of years pays the taxes and not the man who built the house. A property tax is a direct tax on the consumer and is based on the sound principle that the man who gets the benefits of the government service should pay for that service at cost. It is not penalizing, as is usually believed by those who have not given the tax problem any study.

Then again, the Senator believes that they should introduce bills as propaganda to emphasize own little locality-they have come to realize that national conditions are a far more vital long term factor than local conditions.

As J. H. Riddle, economist of the Bankers Trust Company, said some time ago, "The issue before each banker is broader than the mere welfare of his own institution. If we have learned anything from the depression it is the dependence of every bank upon the soundness of the entire credit structure. Credit expended in Pennsylvania or New York may have repercussions in Texas or California, and vice versa. If credit is granted excessively or unwisely in one section, the whole system suffers . . . To what extent will it prove necessary to remodel our banking structure and to what extent are we willing to give up our prejudices in the interest of a sounder and stronger banking system? The savings of the people are too important to be entrusted to any except those completely qualified in character and training."

Every banker worthy of his salt should be eager to make sound investments-to build up his town, his state and his nation. At the same time he should fully realize his vast, inescapable obligations to his depositors. It is their money he manages-not his. And the stimulated interest banking is showing in scientific research, promises to better the service it offers our country, which is vital to all industrial progress, and to a more prosperous nation.

IS PUBLIC EDUCATION COMPATIBLE WITH THE PHILOSOPHY OF CHRISTIANITY!

It might seem to be an absurd question to inquire whether public education is compatible with the philosophy of Christianity. The reason that probably 99 per cent would say public education is compatible with the philosophy of Christianity, undoubtedly, is the misinterpretation of one of the essential principles of Christianity-a principle that has been especially in controversy since the prisons and reformatories read an average of 70 fifth century when Scotus Pelagius made a valiant fight for the principle of freedom of conscience.

> The philosophy of Christianity can really only approach practical every day use when the individual is permitted to use his conscience to make decisions with the least possible coercion or force; that the only coercion or force needed is to prevent the individual from injuring another.

Just as a child cannot learn to walk without walking, neither can a soul be developed without the right to make decisions, free from coercion. A person must have the right to make errors, if his personality and his spirit are to be developed. This is what Jesus so clearly saw and caused him to insist upon the importance of a personality, as against the tyranny and coercion of the state, or of others. He knew as well as anyone who ever lived, that what you do not use, you lose. It does not grow. It dies. If you are not permitted to use your conscience, you lose it.

And Jesus advocated the greatest tolerance in permitting people to physically and materially injure each other without retaliating by force. It will be remembered he said: "If any man take away your coat, let him have thy cloak also;" and, "Whoever shall compel you to do a mile, go with him twain;" again he said, "He that smiteth thee on the right cheek, offer him also the other."

So this principle of having the right to make decisions with the least possible coercion seems to be a very essential principle of the philosophy

Then, if this be true, any law that violates this principle and coerces an individual by fining him or penalizing him for living the life he chooses to live, so long as he does not injure another, is in violation of the philosophy of Christianity.

Let us see whether the public schools coerce, fine or compel an individual to make certain decisions. Under our public school laws, an individual is compelled to contribute to public education, directly or indirectly, even if his conscience tells him the training selected eventually will destroy the philosophy of Christianity and Democracy. If he is a property owner or has a certain income, lckes debate on the freedom of lf the claims m income, whether he wills to or not. RESEARCH IN BANKING

One recent development of great importance in bearing business is the increased interest shown by bank officials in research.
